Your world may be a winter wonderland but the weather can be a nightmare on your hair. It's not just the chilly air that dries it out and contributes to static (caused by the buildup of electrons). Indoor heaters, even hats, can cause breakage and static, says Pantene celebrity stylist Danilo, who has worked with stars like Anne Hathaway and Kate Hudson.

Fortunately, you can keep this problem at bay by using the right shampoo and conditioner for your hair type and style. This will help you meet half of your needs before even putting your hair under the dryer, says Danilo. "If you spent more time understanding your specific hair needs, you would spend less time styling it."

Even if you have fine hair, you should use leave-in conditioners and styling creams this season – as long as you seek out weightless formulas. "What's great about these creams," explains Danilo, "is they don't grease your hair up. They groom it."
